At the end of the story, it seem a relationship has formed and Sadao decides to help the prisoner escape

4. Thinking Skill: Cause and Effect

Because Hana and Sadao studied in the US they believed that every individual must be treated for injury no matter what his race is. This is why, although Tom is their enemy, when they find him washed up on the shore, and wounded, they decide to treat him. They do this even though Japan is at war with America and he is their enemy.

5. Tells Ann their father's side of the story.

7. Kate says "No" to Chris because she doesn't want Chris to marry Ann. She believes that by marrying Ann, he will be admitting Larry is really dead. If Larry is dead, Joe might be responsible and Kate cannot allow this. Therefore she says "No " to Chris.

8. Jim is a central supporting character in the play. He is friendly with the Kellers and seems to understand each one's character. Although he knows what Joe has done, he is loyal to his neighbor and keeps the secret. He supports Chris' values and is his friend. In addition, Jim is there for Kate when she needs him.

9. Thinking Skill: Compare and Contrast

We can compare both Chris' and Larry's response in that they both don't want any connection to their father once they learn he has committed a crime. In contrast to Larry, who commits suicide when he learns of his father's actions, Chris simply wants justice and to take his father to jail. He doesn't want the money from his father's business.

10. Teach his class about the Nazi party

11. Laurie writes about the problems with the new movement, The Wave.

12. Laurie and David have different attitudes about history. Laurie believes that atrocities can be prevented by remembering past events, while David believes that it's best to put the past behind us. Mr. Ross wants to start the experiment in order to show his students a lesson they could never learn in any other about the Nazi party, and thus to change their opinion.

13. In the beginning of the novel, Laurie believes that The Wave can help others. She gives an example of The Wave's success by showing that Robert is no longer bullied. However, later on in the novel she feels uncomfortable with the experiment and understands that it ruins people's individuality and she protests it.

14. INFERRING

Robert didn't change the way he feels after watching sees film for the first time. It was before the The Wave started. At this point of the story, Robert didn't have friends and he didn't believe in himself. However, when the experiment starts he becomes a part of a group and feels better about himself. When he sees the film for the second time, he realizes that The Wave was just an experiment and he it comes to its end. Therefore, I infer that he cries, because he understands he will not be a part of this group again.

Bridging

The quote explains to us that each person is responsible for the choices he makes, and these choices determine his life. The traveler realizes that the choice he makes today will determine his destiny. Therefore, in the last stanza he says "I shall be telling this with a sigh", meaning, he understands that the choice he makes today will determine his future. The traveler realizes that the choice affects his destiny. The quote is clearly reflected in the poem.
