Part 1 – Summeris

1. 2) hangs around the house.
2. 3) Ask Gorge about his reading.
3. The setting is New York during, or following the Great Depression. Many immigrants were trying to improve their status. They understood that education was the key to their success. Mr. Cattanzara encouraged George to read books to improve his status as well because only through reading and becoming educated could George progress and leave the poor New York neighborhood he lived in.
4. Thinking Skill: Predicting

We can predict that George will achieve his goals he has set forth. Although George was impulsive and lied to Mr. Cattanza, he was ashamed of his behavior. As a result, George locked himself in his room in the heat of August. He left his apartment after he could no longer stand the heat. When George finally decides to take responsibility for his behavior, he goes to the library and begins his first real attempt to change his ways which will lead to him reaching his goals.

Part 2

5. 2) Believes that Steve is guilty of the crime
6. Kate is certain that Larry is alive. Therefore, she believes that Ann is clearly waiting for Larry and thus has not married anyone else.
7. Kate is certain that Larry is alive. Therefore, she believes that Ann is clearly waiting for Larry and thus has not married anyone else.
8. Although Kate claims to be stupid, she and her husband Joe are not. They know all along the truth about Joe's behavior and realize that one day the truth will be disclosed if they are not careful. Throughout the play Kate warns Joe to be smart. She reminds Joe that their innocence depends on their smart behavior and careful actions. This is why they are so kind to George and suggest he move back to the neighborhood.
9. Thinking Skill: Comparing and Contrasting

Both Ann and Chris are highly- principled individuals. They both believe that the truth is more important than anything else. Chris describes his relationship with his soldiers and how he admired their dedication. Ann refuses to speak to her father once he is charged with the murder of the pilots. Both characters can be compared to each other as truthful people who behave similarly whereby truth overrides even family-ties.

16. The Enemy

New doctors take the Hippocratic Oath which sets forth certain standards doctors must abide by. Among them, a doctor promises to respect people, tend to his/her patients and not allow any prejudice prevent him/her from treating anyone. In the short story The Enemy, Sadao finds himself in a difficult situation. He has studied medicine in America and most likely took this oath. However, when an American soldier washes up on the shore near his house in Japan during World War 2, he must decide whether his national obligations and his loyalty towards his country can allow him to keep his oath. Sadao and his wife Hanna have a dilemma but decide to treat this enemy per the oath. Throughout the story, we see Sadao's conflict. Even at the end, after he has healed the prisoner, and has set him free, he wonders why he acted as he did.

17. The Road Not Taken

Over the last 150 years, things have changed. Today we can make a decision and then change our minds and have a "second chance". In the poem The Road Not Taken, Frost presents the consequences of making a choice. He describes the dilemma the traveler has when choosing one path over the other. He realizes that once he chooses one way, it is not likely he will have an opportunity to go back and change his decision. According to the quote, and as opposed to the poem, today individuals can make a choice, regret it and start anew.
